Rotary, Boy Scouts mark 100 years

A longtime friend of Rotary -- the Boy Scouts of America -- marked its 100th birthday on 8 February.

The two organizations have worked together since their early days. Rotary founder Paul Harris, after meeting with Chief Scout Executive James E. West in 1910, urged Rotarians to assist in the expansion of the Scouts. By 1930, Rotarians had organized more than half of the then 500 Boy Scout councils, and today Rotary clubs sponsor 1,483 Scout units for 45,528 youth.

Rotary clubs have also contributed financially to Scout troops and helped construct Boy Scout camp buildings. Individual Rotarians have led the Scouts at local, district, and national levels.

In honor of the Boy Scouts of America centennial, Chief Scout Executive Bob Mazduca will address the 2010 RI Convention in Montréal, Quebec, Canada. The Boy Scouts have taken part in RI conventions before. In 1934, Walter W. Head, president of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America, presented Paul Harris with the Scouts' highest honor, the Silver Buffalo Award. At the 1984 convention, the World Organization of the Scout Movement received the Rotary Award for World Understanding and Peace.

Last Week: DSU Multicultural Center

Ronnie Walker, Director of the Center for Multicultural Affairs at Dickinson State University, informed the Rotary members about the Center, how it works, and what it does.

The work of the Center focuses on providing academic, social and transition support for international students and scholars, Native American students, students from historically underrepresented populations, and DSU students studying and living abroad. The goal is to promote exchange and dialogue between people of different countries, ethnic backgrounds, and cultures by supporting the University's efforts to increase, retain and support the presence and success of a diverse student body population. There are 347 foreign students on campus, representing 29 countries.

Community activities by the students are encouraged, and groups and activities such as World Voices, International Club, Business Club, Global Awareness, and participation in Community Service Day help to integrate the students into the college and local community. Partnerships with students in various departments also help both the international students and the native students.
